WASHINGTON PARK, BROOKLYN, Sept. 17.—There were no pennant flavorings to the baseball arguments here this afternoon. They were only ordinary occurrences that a cruel schedule said had to be contested. The Giants and Erooklyns had to play.

In the old days the clashing of the Glants and the Bridegrooms, as the Brooklyns were then called, was a signal for a great gathering of baseball fans. The teams were preity evenly matched then and there was a home and home rivalry that inspired each nine to its best efforts. To-day, while just a wee bit of that rivalry exists, the teams, on past performances this classification.
